WHAT WE STAND FOR

The Haverford Music Festival is produced exclusively by the 501(c)(3) organization Haverford Township Education, Arts & Music Society (“HTEAMS”). HTEAMS is comprised of an all-volunteer board that remains committed to keeping the festival a free admission event, funded solely by sponsors and freewill donations. Net contributions to the Haverford Music Festival have historically benefited grants to public school music therapy, rain gardens, tree planting and trail maintenance, park and playground accessibility, Ardmore Food Pantry and the Food Pantry of Hope United Methodist Church (with food donated from grants to the Oakmont Farmers Market) among many others.

Haverford Music Festival is excited to share that HTEAMS has earned a 2024 Gold Seal of Transparency from the charity-rating organization Candid! Now, you can support our work with trust and confidence by viewing our nonprofit Profile.

4. Haverford Township Music Festival. The free and always charming Haverford Music Festival — which to be clear, is actually in Havertown — returns Saturday after a two-year absence. This year’s headliners are esteemed bluesman Joe Louis Walker and Richard Barone and James Mastro’s indie stalwarts The Bongos. Music starts at noon with South Jersey folk duo AFTYN; highlights include instrumental rock luminaries I Think Like Midnight and Alex Fichera-led duo Sharing Contest. Free, 11 a.m., 8/27, Eagle Road and Hathaway Lane, Havertown, haverfordmusicfestival.org.

It’s a big season for music memoirs. But will they be as good as Amy Rigby’s?

by Dan DeLuca, Updated: September 4, 2019

CHRIS SIKICH

It’s a big season for music memoirs, particularly by women.

Along with Liz Phair, Tegan and Sara and Debbie Harry (who reads at the Free Library of Philadelphia on Oct. 8), who all have books coming in the next month, young songwriters Margo Price and Michelle Zauner (of Philadelphia band Japanese Breakfast) are working on life stories that have no pub dates yet.

The question is: Will any of them turn out to be as good as Girl to City: A Memoir, by Amy Rigby?

If they are, they’ll have to be really good. Rigby doesn’t have the name recognition of the aforementioned authors, but she does have one extremely important thing going for her: She can really write.

On Saturday afternoon, Rigby will perform at the Haverford Music Festival, which is actually located at Eagle and Darby Roads in Havertown, in Delaware County.

The festival is one of the better-kept secrets of the Philadelphia-area music calendar. It’s free. Thirty bands play on four stages. Music starts at noon, and the last act is Larry Campbell and Teresa Williams, featuring the longtime Bob Dylan guitarist and his vocalist wife, at 7:30 p.m.

13th Annual Haverford Music Festival ★ September 6, 2025

This past summer HTEAMS lost our friend, board member, and Haverford Music Festival press officer Barry Gutman. Due to Barry's tireless promotion over the past decade, our festival is now a highly-regarded music festival featuring national and internationally known artists. It is with great pride that we will be naming our main stage the Barry Gutman Oakmont Stage in his honor.
